Virginia Representatives Pleased With Legalized Primary Bill Passed by Legislature.

AN AMENDMENT SUGGESTED

Mr. Jones Wishes to Provide That Candidate May Have Friend Inside Voting Place.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 22 .- A member of the Virginia delegation has made the surprising discovery that the General Assembly at the last session passed a law legalizing all primary elections in Virginia, held in accordance with the plan adopted by any of the political parties. It is believed that there are but very few people who know that such a law was enacted. The editorial in The Times-Dispatch of yesterday, commenting on the primary laws of Mississippl and Lousiana, and ex-pressing the wish that there was a gen-eral legalized primary law in Virginia, was read and commended by the mem-bers of Congress from Virginia, and an hour on two later one of them received from a friend in the Virginia Senate a copy of the law as passed by the last copy of the law as passed by the last Legislature.

THE LAW,
The act is on page 333, acts of Assembly, and reads as follows:
"Section 122, subdivision, 1: No person shall vote at any legalized primary election for the nomination of any candidate for office unless he is at the time registered and qualified to vote at the next succeeding election. next succeeding election.
"2. In all cases where, by its plan of or

"2. In all cases where, by its plan of organization or otherwise, any political party in this State requires its candidates to be nominated by primary elections, such elections shall be conducted by the judges and clerks, or other officers designated by the proper committee or other proper authority of any such party, and under such rules, regulations and requirements as may be prescribed in the plan adopted by such party.

"3. All laws intended to secure the regularity and purity of general and local practices in connection therewith, and the penalties and punishments now or hereafter prescribed by law for such offenses, shall, so far as they may be applicable, penalties and punishments now of here after prescribed by law for such offenses, shall, so far as they may be applicable, apply to all primary elections, whether the same be held under any statute law of this State, or under a plan provided by some political party."

APPROVE THE LAW.

The members of the Virginia delegation have all, with the exception of Mr. Rixey, who could not be seen to-day, & pressed themselves, as heartily approving the law, though the utmost surprise is expressed that the fact of its passage was not sooner known. None of the members was more delighted than Mr. Jones, who is in one sense the father of the primary system in Virginia, having made the first fight for it when he sought to have the candidate for the United States Senate selected in a party primary, through a resolution for which United States Senate selected in a party primary, through a resolution for which he made a strong fight at the Roanoke convention in 1887. Mr. Jones drew the present plan adopted by the State convention at Norfolk, though Mr. Hay is the author of the amendment requiring that congressional candidates shall be chosen in a primary.

that congressional candidates shall be chosen in a primary.

Mr. Jones pointed out to-day that many of the papers of the State and people who are most in favor of the primary system have falled to make themselves clear in discussing the question. They have expressed a desire for a primary law enacted by the General Assembly, whereas, the State convention which adopted the primary plan called upon the Legislature to make the plan then adopted legal. The Legislature had always falled to do this, though the framers of the present Constitution put into the organic law a provision that the General Assembly should have the power to legalize such primary elections. There have been several bills introthe power to legalize such primary elections. There have been several bills introduced providing for a plan of primary election, but sit was not a plan that was needed. The plan had been furnished by the Democratic State convention, and the Legislature was expected only to make the plan legal and throw about it the safeguards which are thrown around State elections.

This has now been done, and the results is a law which will perhaps proves satisfactory to the great mass of the suits is a law which will perhaps prove satisfactory to the great mass of the party in Virginia, as it is eminently so to the Democratic members of Con-gress from the State. SUGGESTS AMENDMENT.

SUGGESTS AMENDMENT.

"I think that in one respect the plan should be modified," said Mr. Jones today, "and that is with regard to the location of the voting places, if nobody else does, I shall offer an amendment at the next State convention, if I am a member of that body, providing that the voting shall be in an open and accessible place, and that each candidate voted for shall have a friend inside the voting place if he desire, to remain until the vote is counted."

place if he desire, to remain that the vote is counted."

Mr. Jones also thought it would be well, probably, to have the present plan amended so as to provide that the voting need not be by the viva voce method in local contests, including those over

In local contests, including those over county offices and sents in the Legislature. He thought that the objection to the open method of voting was chiefly due to the dislike of the people to choosing publicly as between friends who were candidates for the same office, Now that there is a legalized primary plan in the State, it is of great importance that the next State convention cure all the imperfections which have been found in the plan after one trial. It is believed that the viva voce feature is nearly the only one which has been discovered.

DR. GREENE'S NERVURA

TRAINED NURSE, MRS. ANNIE G. DUGGAN

Mrs. Annie G. Duggan, of 6 St. Charles Street, Boston, Mass., for fifteen years has been employed as a nurse in the Boston Hospital. Her reputation in her profession is of the highest, and her opinion, that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will cure rheumatism and sciatica, is therefore worthy of the greatest consideration.

Mrs. Duggan says: "I was troubled with sciatica for over four months, and was treated by three different physicians, but received no relief. As a last resort my friends advised my trying Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which I did, and in six weeks I was a well woman. Although it was four years ago I have had no return of the trouble.

"My sister also was troubled with rheumatism, and I advised her to try Dr. Greene's Nervura, which she did, and received great relief from it. I consider Dr. Greene's Nervura a godsend to me, and gladly recommend it."

Rheumatism is a blood disease. The circulation is impaired, and the blood becomes stagnant and impure. Dr. Greene's Nervura cures rheumatism by restoring normal conditions, so that a moderate use of the remedy will cause the disease to disappear. Of purely vegetable origin, Dr. Greene Nervura blood and nerve remedy acts in concert with natural laws and produces its permanent effect by feeding and enriching the blood supply. It is an ideal tonic when run down or exhausted, and nothing can exceed its inherent power to cure the lingering diseases that wreck the lives and hopes of men and women. Dr. Greene was many years discovering and perfecting the medicine which was finally offered to the world as Nervura, and his carnest and skillful work has been demonstrated by the record of cure which this remedy has made during many years.

If there is anything about your case you do not understand, write to Dr Greene, 101 Fifth Avenue, New York City. His advice is free.

Yesterday Capitain Lipscomb declared that, inasmuch as there was no difference between the place he now holds and the vacant one, either in dignity or salary, be would not run for the former. half hour or more that the body of Mr. Blankenship was discovered, and the manner in which he met his death was disclosed. When he fell into the raceway he was alone and none saw or heard him as he went down. His continued and unexplained absence caused alarm, which provoked a general search for him. When he was at last found, it was more than three hours since he had been seen, dead or alive, by any man on the place.

As superintendent and manager, Mr. Blankenship had entire charge of the Belle Isle Works, and general oversight of the affairs of the establishment. Notwithstanding the fact that he had skilled men under him, to whom he might have delegated the task of looking after the details in the several departments, it was his frequent custom to give his personal attenion to many of these little things. So it happened on yesterday. Some carpentry repair work was necessary, and though he carried his master carpenter with him, Mr. Blankenship personally undertook to prepare a sketch or specification of the proposed improvements. or specification of the proposed improve-ments.

The Horseshoe Shop.

Thus about noon the superintendent went from his office to the horseshoe department, toward the other end of the island. Accompanying him was Mr. Woodward, head of the carpenter shop. The two inspected the place. After a while, Mr. Woodward went away to dinner, leaving Mr. Blankenship there. The latter spoke to Foreman Schneider, remarking about the rottenness of some of the timbers. With his hand he pulled a piece out of one of the huge joists. The mark is still displayed by the workmen; the words the superintendent uttered at that time were probably his list, The Horseshoe Shop.

list,
The machinery in the horseshoe department is driven by a ponderous waterwheel, encased in iron and lying flat. This wheel is fed by a strong current from the canal. The upper end of the forebay is bridged by huge joists perhaps ten inches apart. It was here and among the corresponding timbers further down that the repairs were to be made. After it passes under the joists the water whirls through a great pipe by means of which it reaches the wheel before mentioned.

Fell Through Toists.

Fell Through Joists.

Fell Through Joists.

When he was last seen, Mr. Blankenship was standing upon the jelsts drawing a sketch of the place. For some days past he had been somewhat indisposed, and had complained of a headache. The only conceivable supposition is that he was seized with vertigo and fell between the timbers, into the rushing water, in which he was swept into the pipe and thence to the wheel. His notebook with his half-finished drawing was found beside the place.

His continued absence from his customory haunts about the place, caused an uncasiness among the employes, and eventually a search. The superintendent did not appear at the dinner that is daily served on the Isle, nor could he be found anywhere about the works. The uncasiness was momentarily intensified, and finally it was suggested that the missing man must be in the canal. The wheel was stopped, the gateways were let down, and the water ran slowly out. A manhole in the casting of the water wheel was opened and four men—Richard Hunter and his son; Joe McGary, and Willis Sydner—crawled in. Groping about in the pitch darkness, their hands soon reached the body of Mr. Blankenship. The mutilation was slight. The left hand was torn and the face scarred and cut. But the body had evidently floated in the pipe until the water was in the wheel. ed in the pipe until the water was let out. While the water was in the wheel there was not sufficient room within the casing to admit it. The unfortunate man had met instantaneous death from drowning.

Body Taken Out.

Body Taken Out.

Slowly and reverently the still form was removed from the death trap. The din of Belle Isle was hushed; every wheel, every hammer was silent. The officials of the company and the grimy workmen stood around and watched the beloved body raised. Tears dimmed the eyes of many a hard-fisted son of toil at that moment.

Upon the floor of the horseshoe shop the body of Mr. Blankenship was stretched. An undertaker presently arrived and arranged the romains within a temporary coffin. The relatives of Mr. Blankenship was stretched. An undertaker presently arrived and arranged the romains within a temporary coffin. The relatives of Mr. Blankenship was stretched. An undertaker presently arrived and arranged the romains within a temporary coffin. The relatives of Mr. Blankenship were notified, and Coroner Taylor was summoned. Later on in Richmond the coroner viewed the body and last night removed to the residence.

Through a driving mist of rain the dead body was borne to the conveyance on the other side of the river. A half-dozen workmen carried the coffin while the others stood silently by and watched the sad little procession as it moved along. Through the yards the little cortego passed and then across the long bridge, with great clouds overhead, and the willd river scenery at every side.
